BEAUTIFUL SENTIMENT .-- In his admir able speech at the opening of the great National Sænderfest in St. Louis, on the 14th ult., Senator Carl Schurz expressed the following beautiful sentiment:

Music is a language which cannot be translated into words. Every one may understand it differently, but every sen-sible man understands it correctly for himself. For this language every one carries his own dictionary in his own breast. In each one it calls up different thoughts and awakens different sensations, but in all only good. An obscene picture, or an obscene piece of sculpture may taint our fancy, but no one has ever yet learned anything bad from music and harmony. A melody may be accompa-nied by bad words, but melody itself without the words is innocent. Strip the operas of Offenbbach of their text and the music may appear meaningless, but it speaks nothing evil. Music has exalted many. It has never debased any one, neither by it has any one ever been mist-d into harm. It may excite the feelings, and even inflame the passions, but only the noble. Music is the purest and most virtuous of all arts. It lifts us from the vulgar up to the things far above us. It is the voice of the unutterable, the color of the invisible. Its employment leaves no spot, and no regret behind. In its impressions the purest sensibilities of men are purified.

The music festival is therefore the noblest, purest of all popular festivals. It has drawn thousands upon thousands to our decorated city, and into this hall. Here nobody has come for his own self benefit. Here business jealousies are silent. The voice of selfishness is dumb. The little strife of parties in church and state is here forgotten. In the harmonious commingling of sounds which resuch vulgarity, the differences of the everyday life battle do not intrude. All that makes us discontented, and bitter, and warnke has to-day sunk and disappeared in the ocean of harmony.

A SPHERE FOR WOMAN. - Women are naturally good economists. They are apt to understand how to make limited means go as far as possible. If a man and his wife are united in the desire to get rich, the man is apt to think more about earning the money; the wife will attach more importance to saving it. Almost every American earns money enough to be well off, and in time be If he does not become so, it is, in many cases, because he has no wife, or because he does not take her into his counsels. He is full of enterprise, and mades an income. If he does not presper, it is often because he does not wold on to it. His wife, very likely, has the faculty of conversation which he facks; he has the sarewdness to enlist her in his plaus, he well find his fortune lu continental Europe bookkeeping is a part of the education of a well-taught farmer's daughter, and his wife presides over the finances of the establishment. In England, women's aptitude in the promotion of matrimonial prosperity is too little thought of; and a who as a girl, was untaught in respect to judicious economy, makes an expensive wife. Her husband, perhaps, keeps her in ignorance of his finance purposely. If he is prosperous, she becomes accustomed to plenty of money, and ill prepared for reverses. It he is not prosperous, she has to bear the pinchings of poverty without knowing how to help him to avoid the pressure. Marriage would be easier and happier if young women were taught the principles of account keeping and systematic haoits in respect to fina cess; and if the young husband would take his wife into his confidence, and make the income and expenditures, and the secumulation of the first few hundred dollars a matter of common interest. A woman of average intelligence and good sense, can make the fortune of a man whose lave she en-joys, and who will give her for the pur-pose a full share in the responsible con-trol of the income of the household. She will not generally be able to enter into his business plans; but if she knows his income (whether wages, salary, or cur-rent profits) and his personal expenses, and can thus foresee what the housewold and can thus foresee what the household has to rely on, she will characteristically be ready to "cut the cost according to the cloth," and will usually be more scrupulous than he to lay aside some-thing every season as the beginning of their forence. their fortune.

The tedium of waiting for the ministers at a late funeral was in a measure relieved by a practical individual who canvass the relatives and friends of the de-ceased with the following result: Greeley, 18; Grant, 21; Undecided, 8.
